Mount Brooks (Unit 87)

Snow, ice, and rock. The mountains, including Silverthrone and Brooks, are prominent features of the Alaska Range northeast of Mount McKinley. Bear dens in northern part of unit.

This area is accessed at least two times annually by one of the mountaineering concessionaires in addition to private trips that number around a dozen annually. There is a designated cache spot (Cache rock below McGonagall Pass) for food and equipment freighted in by dog sled in the winter for summer climbs. Wilderness experience is excellent, degraded by overflights.
